PRODUCT PREPARATION PROCESS

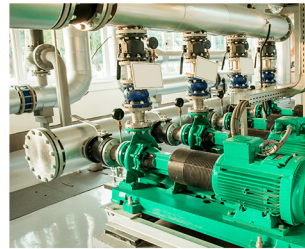

FOUNDRY

During the casting stage, a special mold, the mentioned shell, is filled with a cast of raw material used to form the faucet body, which is an alloy of brass made from copper and zinc.

POLISHING

This process is essential to achieve precise surface finishing. To obtain a high-quality product that exudes a shine, the brass surface is polished to technical precision. This is a combination of manual and machine-driven processes. Once the polishing is done, only then can the product be sent for chrome plating

MACHINING

This is a computer-controlled process that ensures that all the surfaces of the die-casted product are finished with a high degree of efficiency and smoothness. The passage through which the water will pass is also smoothened using the machining process.

CHROME PLATING

Chrome plating is one of the fundamental steps of the faucet manufacturing process. Chrome is formed through the accumulation of dual nickel and chrome coatings onto the parts to be chromed by immersing them in a series of electrolytic solution baths.

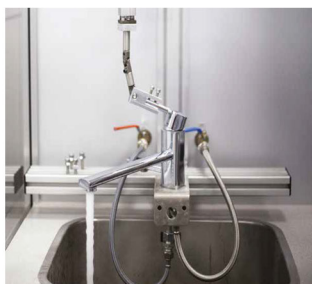

CHECKING FOR DEFECTS

The products are checked physically for imperfections like asymmetric lines and curves, polishing errors, and geometrical errors. This ensures that the next process is more efficient.

ASSEMBLY LINE

The assembly can involve both manual and automated processes. This process takes place on rotary assembly machines which are precisely controlled. The nozzle, if separate, is installed first. Cartridge and control levers are installed after the nozzle.

TESTING

The created faucets are then tested rigorously on both water and compressed air. Samples are tested for critical dimensions and durability. Faucets are also required to pass several environmental regulations.
